MEET THE CANDIDATES

Two more West Sacramentans who hope to have your vote on the November 4 ballot —

Yolanda Villanueva, candidate for city council

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Yolanda Villanueva hopes to win a seat on the West Sacramento and change things up a bit.

"They've been there too long — the incumbents are too comfortable," she told the News-Ledger. "They act like they don't have to answer any questions."

Villanueva is part of the new Bryte & Broderick Community Action Group, representing residents in the north of the city.

"I'm on two of their committees," she said. "The city wants to take away Bryte Park. I'm on that committee. Bryte and Broderick will have no park if they take it away. They're saying it's school district property, and I'm looking into that."

She wants the north part of West Sacramento to have the same kind of amenities as the south.

"I just came from work," said Villanueva. "I came off the freeway here (at Jefferson Blvd.), and it's so beautiful, with flowers planted, and a "welcome to West Sacramento" sign. It's nice here" — she indicated the panorama nearby in the Walgreen shopping center — "and they have a bench to rest on. North of that, they've got nothing — no benches, no beautiful trees, nothing. Why is it depressing as I drive home? What do Bryte and Broderick have? Old, beat up schools."

Villanueva is active with the city's northern little league, called Washington Little League. She thinks that the division between Washington and West Sacramento Little League (which serves the center and south) is a symbol of the division in the city as a whole.

"They literally fight among each other," stated

Villanueva. "Why? We're all West Sacramento. We need to educate the parents that this is a good way to educate your children. We're West Sacramento. These kids (in Washington Little League) are going to go to school with the kids in West Sacramento Little League when they get to high school."

What does she think of the city government's fiscal health?

"Is it healthy? I don't know," Villanueva responded. "Every time we ask where the money is, they just don't tell us. When we got all these new homes, we asked, where's the $1 million for the botanical garden. Nobody has given the answer."

She is generally supportive of the city's police and fire departments' progress.

"The new fire station (in Southport) is beautiful. However, with the police department, we need to clean that up. They need to get out of their cars and get to know the people. We're a community-driven place. It's not hard to learn who people are if you just get out of your (police) car. Right now, the children are scared of the police."

"We do have problems," she continued. "We have both a homeless and a drug problem. But how many drug

Christopher Cabaldon: believes in city's progress

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Christopher Cabaldon is running for another two-year term as Mayor of West Sacramento.

"The successes we've had in the city are nowhere near complete, and they're threatened by larger forces in the economy and by the need for the largest flood protection effort in our history," said Mayor Christopher Cabaldon. "West Sacramento has had dreams come to reality. We keep developing major projects that symbolize improvement. Raley Field was the beginning, but (the new CalSTRS building) and the waterfront have followed. We've become one of the most admired cities in the region."

Development of homes has led to amenities such as new retail, he said. The city has more places for locals to shop than it did a decade or two ago.

"Things like Target, Nugget, Ikea. . . all those projects happened because of development," said Cabaldon.

Cabaldon received several hundred thousand dollars worth of support from local developers when he campaigned unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination to State Assembly seat this spring. But "I don't pay attention to campaign contributions when I make my decisions on behalf of the public," he argued.

Cabaldon contrasted his position on various development projects with those of his main opponent, Mark Johannessen.

"I'm one of the most frequent critics of developers, and one of the most frequent to vote 'no,'" said Cabaldon. "Mark has never voted 'no.'"

He also criticized Johannessen's vow to cut city development costs and fees.

"You can't just cut the fee," said the mayor. "If your parks master plan says you're going to build this park or that pool, or that basketball court, you can't cut the fee without changing that master plan."

How's the city's fiscal health doing on the incumbent's watch?

"It's relatively strong," he said last week as the stock market crashed and sent shockwaves through much of the nation. "We, Roseville and Citrus Heights are the strongest cities in the region, fiscally. We're not in deficit. Last year, we took in more than we budgeted and spent less than we budgeted. We haven't made any layoffs."

Are the city's new retailers — like Ikea and Home Depot — responsible for keeping West Sacramento's coffers awash in sales tax revenues?

"The retailers? If Riverpoint Center, and particularly Ikea, Wal-Mart and Home Depot

Ground broken for library

The "shhh!" rule at the site of Turner branch library is temporarily suspended for construction.

Members of the West Sacramento City Council and the Yolo County Board of Supervisors broke ground on the new Arthur F. Turner Community Library, Oct. 7. The site is the same location as the original Turner Library, 1212 Merkley Ave., but the new library will be approximately twice the size of the original facility. Yolo County and the City of West Sacramento are project partners. The Turner Community Library is expected to open to the public in late 2009. It will be part of the new West Sacramento Civic Center which will include a satellite campus of Los Rios Community College and the city's Community Center. Dog sought:

Yolo County Health Department officials are looking for a "dark brown and black pit bull and labrador mix" dog that bit a six-year old boy last Monday, Oct. 6.

The bite happened about 6:30 p.m. at Bridgeway Island Park, near Golden Gate Drive and Promenade Street.

The dog was under the control of three young girls.

The dog needs to be found so health officials can address any concerns that the boy was exposed to rabies.

Anyone with information is asked to call (530) 666-8646 or (530) 668-5287.

Pre-election policies for News-Ledger ads, letters

The News-Ledger will once again enforce its traditional election year policies.

No negative allegations about any candidate or campaign will be generally allowed in the final week before the election, since the targets of such criticism won't get a fair chance to respond before election day.

Advertising or opinion submissions in our final pre-election edition (Oct. 29) should stay "positive" to have a chance of publication. The editor's decision is final. Our normal and more flexible editorial standards still apply through Oct. 22.

Political ads will receive page position preference based on the order in which they are received and paid for. Deadline is "prior Friday."

Call 371-8030 with any questions.

Who will you be for Halloween?

Note: A few days ago, a longtime friend invited me to one of those Halloween costume parties which seem so popular with adults nowadays.

"No, thanks," I quickly said. "You wouldn't catch me dead in a Halloween costume at this age."

"Well," said my smiling friend, "then don't wear one. You've always been a dead-ringer for Mr. Spock, so just come as yourself."

When I didn't return my friend's smile, our little conversation ended, but I was reminded of the following column, written a dozen or so years ago, which I have reluctantly decided to let see the light of day again.

When I was in my early 20s, my favorite television show was Star Trek. I could hardly wait each week to hear the words, "Space – the final frontier – these are the voyages of the star ship Enterprise – its mission is to explore strange new worlds – to seek out new life and new civilizations – to boldly go where no man has ever gone before!"

And what a cast! There was Captain Kirk, who wasn't afraid of anything in the entire universe (I remember that even my girlfriend had this incredible crush on him, although she swore it was just because he had perfect posture); Spock, who could outwit any alien he came across with his dispassionate logic, and if that didn't work, he would just casually snuff them out with one of his patented Vulcan death grips; Bones, the opinionated ship's doctor who was continually trying to humanize Spock when he wasn't busy examining patients and coming up with really complex medical diagnoses by simply scanning the critically ill with what looked like nothing more than a Remington electric razor; and of course, Scottie, who was always just precious moments away from running out of enough power to keep the Enterprise from blowing up or being trapped forever in some deep dark black hole in outer space.

His character, by the way, also led to the best bumper sticker I've ever seen, which simply reads, "Go ahead, Scottie – beam me up."

A few years ago, I tried real hard to get interested in Star Trek – The New Generation, but without a lot of success. The new captain was some old bald guy named Jean-Luc Picard and he just never seemed to have that confident air of absolute control (not to mention perfect posture) that Captain Kirk had when he stood on the deck barking out orders to Chekov, Sulu and Uhura. Lavar Burton had a pretty good role as Geordi La Forge, but that weird-looking thing they stuck around his eyes from ear to ear looked so ridiculous that it was hard to take anything he said or did very seriously. The best character by far on the new series was a Klingon named Lieutenant Worf, but for some reason the creators of the show decided to stick a big cow patty on his forehead with huge veins running all through it and I could never concentrate on what he was saying because I couldn't take my eyes off the darn thing.

Anyway, way back when Star Trek was the biggest thing on television, I started to notice that some of my friends – and also an alarming number of complete strangers – thought I looked a little like Captain Kirk's loyal sidekick, Mr. Spock.

"I think it's because of the way you get your hair cut," my girlfriend at the time finally told me one day. "Just don't let your barber cut all the hair above your ears anymore."

"But Spock's ears are pointed!" I exclaimed. "My ears aren't pointed."

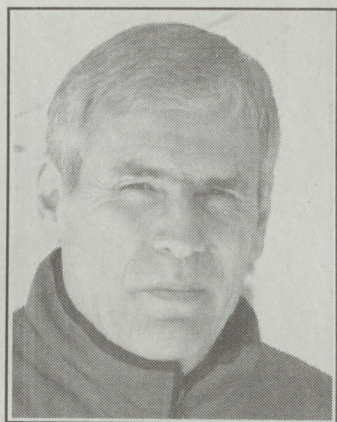

"I know that," she quickly tried to explain. "I didn't say your ears are pointed, now did I? You need to stop being so sensitive. It's just that – well – you have black hair like Spock – and you kinda cut it the same way he cuts his – and you have the same menacing eyebrow – and your facial features are a little like his – and your ears are – well – you know – just a little prominent."

"You are too saying I look like Spock!" I shouted in disbelief.

"No, I'm not," she swore, "but even if I was, I happen to think that Mr. Spock is a very nice looking man. You should – well, you know – take it as a compliment."

"But Spock's not a man at all," I reminded her. "He's a bloody Vulcan!"

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The Major League playoffs are starting to heat up this week as the series shifts to the Cities of Boston and Los Angeles. As of Tuesday morning the Tampa Bay Rays are up 2-1 over the defending champion Red Sox and Philadelphia has the Dodgers on the ropes in Los Angeles leading the series 3-1. If Boston can win at least one game at home in their best of seven series games 6 & 7 would be played at Tropicana Field in Florida.

The Dodgers are in big trouble and need a three game sweep against the Phillies or their season is over. Next game is on Wednesday night (5 p.m.) in Los Angeles.

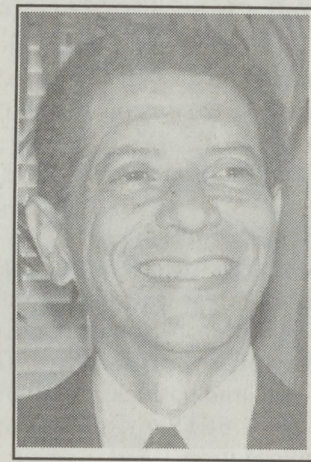

In the AL, the Rays are surprising the baseball world with their offensive power and with a young line-up of no-name players who just happen know how to play the game of baseball. The Rays are fun to watch especially when you compare them with the veteran line-up the Boston Red Sox are fielding. The pressure is on Boston to repeat as World Champions!

NFL Week 7

On Sunday, the 49ers (2-4) played like they were going to beat the Philadelphia Eagles going into the third quarter leading 26-17 but then it happen - again! The 49ers turned into the 49ers of old. Quarterback J.T. O'Sullivan turned the ball over three times in the fourth quarter, and a 26-17 49ers lead melted into a 40-26 loss, the 49ers' third consecutive defeat.

The Eagles scored every time they had the ball in the final quarter - three field goals and an offensive touchdown, and also an interception returned for a touchdown - and the 49ers' nine-point lead turned into a two-touchdown deficit. The Niners converted just two of 12 of its third-down attempts venturing into the red zone four times and had to settle for three field goals. Coach Nolan job security is getting down to fourth and goal.

The Raiders (1-4), who were coming off a bye week, played like they were still on vacation. The New Orleans Saints introduced new head coach Tom Cable to his first NFL loss with a thorough 34-3 beating before a rowdy crowd 70,000 at the Superdome. Sebastian Janikowski scored the only points for the Raiders with his 24-yard field goal in the first quarter but I really enjoyed watching Sea-Bass two record breaking field goal attempts of 57 and 59-yards!

The Silver and Black's million dollar secondary played like fifty-cents on Sunday giving up 320 yards to Drew Brees, who completed 26 of 30 passes, including his first 16, with three touchdowns and a passer rating of 144, which is almost perfect.

Raiders QB JaMarcus Russell on the other hand, endured a rough game with a 40.1 passer rating completing just 13 of 35 passes for 159 yards with one interception and he also lost fumble on a sack. New Orleans outgained Oakland in total net yards 441-226, had 11 more first downs, and was at 64 percent on third-down conversions, compared to the Raiders' 38 percent. Not a good day for Oakland!

Next Sunday, the 49ers (10 a.m. FOX) and Raiders (1:15 p.m. ch.13) will play the teams from the Big Apple with the Niners (+8 ½) traveling to New York play the Giants while the Da Raiders (+4) host the Brett Favre and the Jets.

The Dodgers are in big trouble and need a three game sweep against the Phillies or their season is over.

In the AL, the Rays are surprising the baseball world with their offensive power and with a young line-up of no-name players who just happen know how to play the game of baseball.

Aztec's Picks

Aztec the dog (11-13) won all three NFL picks but was his colleges pick, Missouri flat out lost to Oklahoma State, missing their opportunity to move up in the NCAA rankings to No. 1. This week's, "College Lick of the Week" will be changed to the "jinx of the week" because Aztecs last three selections been major upsets with the losing teams dropping in the rankings.

In the NCAA, Oklahoma (-18) will use Kansas as their stepping stone to No. 1 and in the NFL, the Colts (-1 ½) will stampe the Packers in Green Bay while the Dolphins (-2) swim circles around the Ravens in Miami and on Monday night New England (-3) will corral the Broncos.

Enjoy your day - see ya next week!

Medical Decisions: Who Will Make Yours?

With modern medical advances and the Hippocratic oath, doctors work to sustain life at whatever the cost — even when it means that the life will be lived without regaining consciousness and/or plugged into machines to keep breathing, circulate the blood and provide nutrients.

It is extremely important to think about what decisions you would like to make for yourself, before you are in a position where these decisions are dumped on grieving loved ones or a doctor whose mission is to sustain life. It is no longer enough to make out a will to dispose of physical possessions, it is also essential to make out an Advance Medical Directive stating what you want done when you are no longer able to make those decisions for yourself. Do it as a kindness to your family at a horrible time in their lives!

Too many of us leave the burden on our loved ones or the doctors. Make your own decisions about what you want done to prolong life.

The Compassionate Care Alliance is a non-profit organization which helps families and individuals think through end-of-life decisions.

Their workshops help individuals and families prepare Advance Health Care Directives stating what each person chooses to do in situations where they can no longer speak for themselves. The West Sacramento Senior Center (664 Cummins Way) and the Compassionate Care Alliance will host a workshop October 30 at 6:00 to discuss advance directives. Attendees will receive a free packet of materials (including a free Advance Health Care Directive).

The workshop will provide ideas for talking to your family members about these issues, information about the directives, and help in completing a directive. It is never too early to take care of yourself and your family.

Life is uncertain; take care of yours while you can!

Please call to reserve your space in this upcoming event, 916 373 5819.

Jurors & public pass out art awards

The Neighbor's Fair Art Show was held October 1-3 at the Civic Center. The exhibition was judged by Diana Daniels Associate Curator of the Crocker Art Museum. Local artists entered their works in a variety of media.

There were sculptures in metal and clay, photographs, wood watercolors, acrylics, glass, oil, pencil and thread. Diana Daniels said, "I found the entrants very skilled in a variety of mediums which gave me an opportunity to assemble a very interesting exhibit of local art."

The Juror's awards for "First Place Adult" for Five Hundred Dollars went to Martha Velazquez for "Pergamino", "Second Place Adult" for Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars went to Karen Tomfohr-Fitzgerald for "Time for What?" "Third Place Adult" for One Hundred and Twenty five Dollars went to Jerry Brown for "Mean Monkey". Honorable Mentions for Adult were awarded to Carol Hawkins for "Beyond the Fence II", Everett Smith "Less than Lethal", Jim Mahan for "Rocker" and Martha Velazquez for "Apacionado".

"First Place Junior" ($200) went to Robert Loyd for "Can Art", "Second Place Junior" ($100) went to Ryan Edgar for "Piano" and "Third Place Junior" ($50) went to Tamara Lopatin for "Untitled Watercolor I". Cash prize levels were similar in other categories.

A reception for the artists was held on Thursday October 2nd and the people who attended had the last opportunity to cast ballots for the People's Choice Awards. The night was festive with a Beat Nick Café Theme with "cool" morsels to taste and beverages to quench your thirst.

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon was on hand to welcome guests and artists to the event and to present the "People's Choice Awards" voted by attendees themselves. The awards for First Place Adult went to Jerry Brown for "Mean Monkey", Second Place went to Jo Jo Gillies for "Peaceful Haven" and Third Place went to Carol Hawkins for "Beyond the Fence II". The Junior First Place Award went to Ryan Edgar for "Piano", and Second Place went to Tamara Lopatin for Martha Velazquez, the judge's first choice pick for adult artist, with Mayor Christopher Cabaldon. Behind them is the artist's dark and moody oil painting of a horse -- part of the display at the city hall gallery for the Neighbors Art Show.

Untitled I and Third Place went to Rachael Miller for "Frank N Fort".

Jean Sewitzky this year's chairperson, said "We would like to thank Nugget Markets, Raley's Bel-Air, Rominger West Winery and The Club Pheasant for sponsoring this year's reception. My thanks for the support of the people in this community and the help of the many volunteers that it takes to bring an exhibition like this together. I am very happy with the quality and variety of the show this year"

Guest commentary from Stu Greenfeld: 'YOU MADE THE BOOK'

This is a great addition to West Sacramento (that is, if you like Japanese food).

My wife and I recently had lunch at Tsuki Sushi. The restaurant is located at Lake Washington Blvd (in the Westbridge Plaza). From the outside, all you will see is a sign, a door and a number of dark tinted windows. What a wonderful surprise when you go inside. Go through the doors and you will discover a nice décor, friendly service, and good food at reasonable prices. Try the Mochi (flavored ice cream in a rice wrap). It's great! Tsuki Sushi, you made the book.....

I want you all to know that I support good, clean, healthy teeth. Dental services are a very necessary component to support these qualities. However, having stated my support of good teeth and adequate dental services, many persons, including me are very disappointed that the new building on Lake Washington Blvd will house a dental group instead of a new restaurant. What a great location for a Red Lobster, a Hungry Hunter, a Sizzler or any other number of good family restaurants. Many of my West Sacramento friends and neighbors have expressed their disappointment with this turn of events. With all the new buildings going up in our city, maybe a new restaurant is still in our future "Oh no Mr. Bill" our newest building has made the book.

I guess more than a few people are reading this column. Some of them have contacted me about problems with their neighbors. Two people complained to me about their neighbor throwing loud parties that went on into the early morning hours. The same partying neighbors appear to be storing many of their possessions in the yard in front of their house. According to their neighbors, a large, unsightly van, that hasn't been moved in two years, is parked on the side of the driveway. Lately, 30 or 40 doors are also standing in this driveway.

Another reader complained to me about a house on the corner of his street that has had a good portion of its fence on the ground for several months. The complainant said that he was so tired of seeing tree trimmings lying around this same house, that he cleaned and haul them away. Barking dogs, early in the morning and late at night, is another complaint that has been expressed by readers of this column.

Before you suggest that these readers contact code enforcement, animal control and/or the police department; they tell me that they have already submitted these complaints. Most of these violations appear not to be covered by city ordinance, etc. Good neighbor behavior, consideration of others, and appearance of your home are values that most people support. However, there are those that don't. All personal behavior cannot and should not be controlled by ordinance or law. No one wants undo interference in his or her personal life. Unfortunately, there are still persons who have never acquired values of consideration and respect for others and thus create problems for their neighbors.

To these people, I say "You have definitely made the book".

From Cheryl Boney
Deputy Director Public
Health Programs
County of Yolo

Flu season is coming. Flu vaccine for seniors (60 years and older) and other high risk populations will be available at three Yolo County Health Department sponsored clinics.

"The earlier a person gets their flu vaccine, the sooner they'll be protected," states Dr. Bette Hinton, Yolo County Health Officer. "By getting your flu vaccine, you protect yourself and those around you."

The flu can make a person sick enough that they may not be able to go to work or school. Flu can also be bad enough to cause hospitalization. Nationwide, seasonal flu causes over 200,000 hospitalizations, and over 36,000 deaths each year.

Seniors, over the age of 60, are more vulnerable to complications from the flu. A clinic is planned for 9-11 a.m. on Oct. 30 at the West Sacramento Senior Center, 664 Cummins Way. Other times and locations are available by calling (530) 666-8645 or (916) 375-6380.

Cost for these clinics is a voluntary donation of $10, cash or check only. For further information about these clinics, call the Health Department at (530) 666-8645, or in West Sacramento, (916) 375-6380.

For other locations where flu shots may be available, check the www.flucliniclocator.org website.

To prevent the spread of the flu and other contagious diseases, the following steps can be taken.

Clean your hands. Washing your hands often will help protect you from germs, and stop the spread of germs.

Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth. Germs often spread when a person touches something that is contaminated with germs and then touches his or her eyes, nose or mouth, which allows the germs to enter your body.

Avoid close contact. Avoid close contact with people who are sick. When you are sick, keep your distance from others to protect them from getting sick, too.

Stay home when you are sick. If possible, stay home from work, school and errands when you are sick. You will help prevent others from catching the illness.

Cover your mouth and nose. Cover your mouth and nose with a tissue when coughing or sneezing. It may prevent others around you from getting sick.

"Good hygiene practices are the first line of defense in preventing the spread of contagious diseases," adds Dr. Hinton. "Getting the flu vaccine, and following good hygiene practices will help stop the spread of the flu."

Grand Jury not so long ago (along with the current Mayor Christopher Cabaldon). I am truly not trying to make this a personal attack, I am just trying to add some food for thought along with the facts before you cast your vote.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The News-Ledger traditionally does not allow negative allegations about anyone running for office in the final week before an election, since the target of such an attack will not have a chance to respond before the vote. Our usual editorial policies apply for the Oct. 22 edition, but for the Oct. 29 edition, the "no negative campaigning" rule will apply.

programs do we have in Bryte and Broderick? None. They have to go to Woodland for that." "I don't see a gang problem," said Villanueva. "I'm out every day. If I see kids out, I say 'hey, boys, what are you doing?' I talk to them. I treat them with respect." Villanueva approves of the city's efforts to improve its flood defenses. "They're working very well at it," she commented. "I don't know how much we have left to spend on that, and I'd like to see that amount." Asked to comment on development, Villanueva cited its impacts on local traffic. "They knew they were going to build all that housing (in Southport), so why didn't they make the streets bigger?" she asked. "West Sacramento has plenty of land. You know how long it takes me to get from home to the school on Linden Road? Twenty minutes!" She wants to see another bridge across the river, and she wants to see light rail on it. She isn't in favor of the city's advisory measure on next month's ballot, which asks whether citizens support a sales tax increase. The money would go to flood protection and to a planned streetcar system connecting West Sacramento's civic center and riverfront to Sacramento. "I'm not going to go for it," she said. "We're all going to be taxed, but Bryte and Broderick aren't going to get any of this. We're not going to improve our schools with it or get another park." She supports Mark Johannessen for mayor, Teresa Blackmer for school board and Salina Valencia as another good choice for city council. Villanueva works for the state Department of Consumer Affairs, where she helps people with complaints. She is divorced, with two grown sons. She cares for a 15-year old grandson. She has played baseball and coached little league in town. Family and friends call her "Auntie L." Her campaign for city council will be on the low budget side. "I'm not going to be raising a lot of money," she said. "I'm hoping to get enough campaign money to put signs up in everybody's yard. And I'm going to do a door-to-door campaign with a bunch of friends."

hadn't opened – if Mark (Johannessen) and other opponents of that project had prevailed – we would be in dire fiscal straits." He was stating that Johannessen had supported an unsuccessful legal challenge to the Riverpoint Center, brought forward by an opponent of Wal-Mart's non-union labor force. "It also takes prudent fiscal management," he added, in a remark about the city's budget picture. But the economic slowdown is producing a challenge. "This is the moment we'll really be tested," said Cabaldon. "Flood protection is an example of that. It does require extensive work with other levels of government, but it also means making smart local choices." Cabaldon is also pleased with playing a role in local education, which is mostly a matter for the local school district. "We've turned the page in education," he commented. "The mayor alone can't drive change, but I've tried to link with other community leaders and to bring in some outside help, like the UC Davis partnership (for a charter school) and a universal preschool program. With the new library and new community college, too, we are seeing a lot of change." Cabaldon, 42, is a transplant to West Sacramento who has been involved in city leadership for years. As a profession, he has served as a legislative staffer, a vice president of the Los Rios Community College system, and as the leader of an education-related nonprofit. He left that last job to run for Assembly, and doesn't plan to look for a new career until after the mayoral campaign ends next month. Cabaldon is a native of Los Angeles with a UC Berkeley education. He lives near Park Boulevard. He made news several years ago when, as a sitting mayor, he publicly stated that he was a gay man. In the coming election, he supports several candidates, all incumbents. "I've endorsed Oscar (Villegas) and I'm supporting Bill (Kristoff)," he said of the council race. "And I'm supporting both Barry (Kalar) and Mary (Leland)," he added, in a reference to the school board competition. Cabaldon also favors the advisory measure the city council has added to the November 4 ballot. The measure asks residents whether they approve of a half-cent sales tax increase to help fund levee improvements and a streetcar project.

His opponent, Johannessen, has told the News-Ledger he thinks it will take a $50,000 campaign for him to win. Cabaldon did not say what his own fundraising target was. But he is experienced with high-cost and hard-fought campaigns. "I won't spend that much," he said of the $50,000 mark. "This is the ninth campaign I've run in West Sacramento. But I'm running hard. I'll spend what it takes to make sure the voters know who I am and what I stand for."

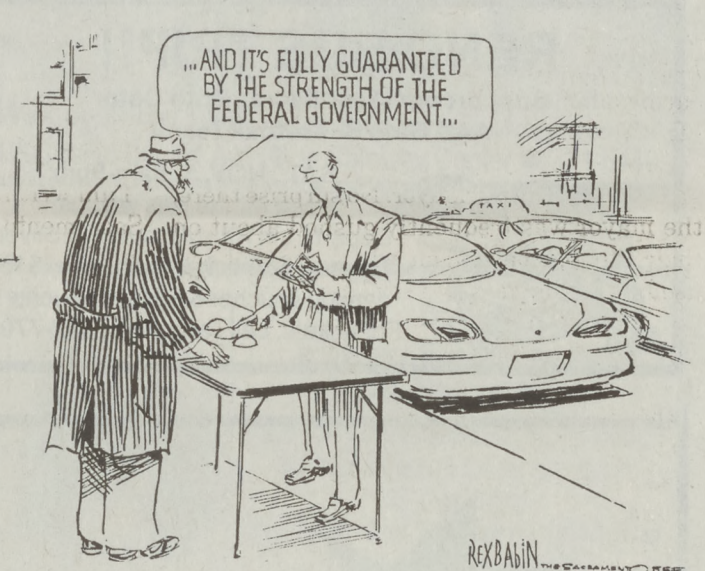

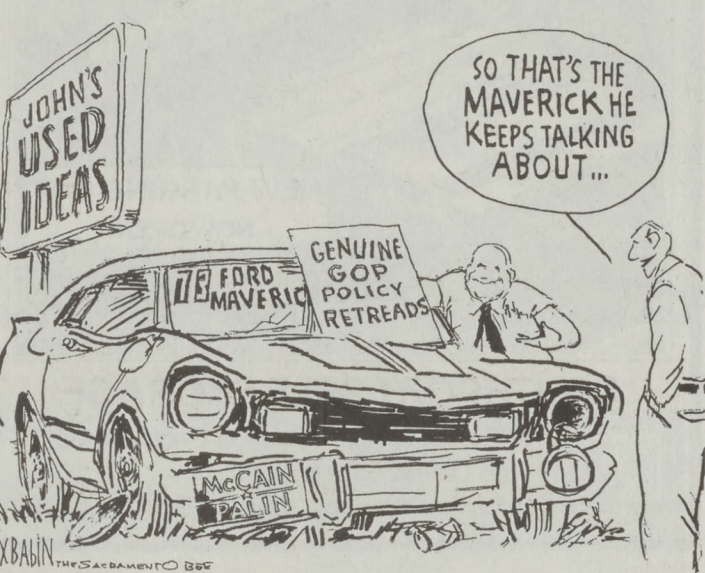

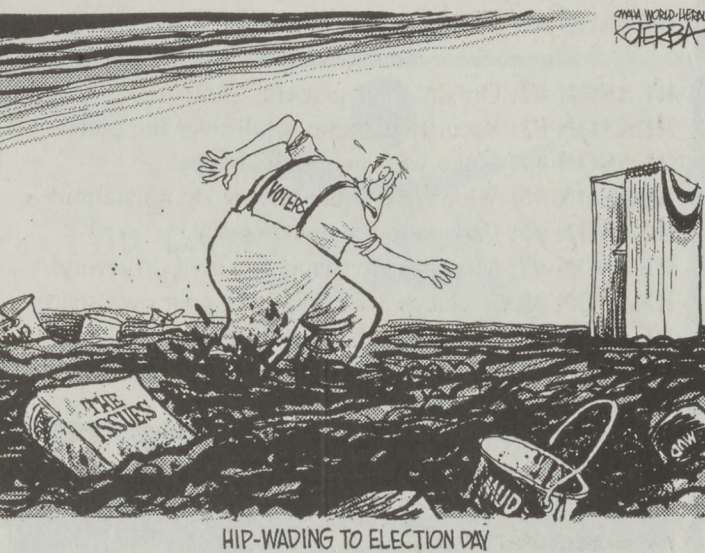

Halloween Safety

Make sure your children stay safe this Halloween with the following tips from Mary Muscare, associate professor at Binghamton University, State University of New York. First, choose costumes wisely. Costumes should allow for adequate vision and mobility. Make sure that it fits appropriately so that your child doesn't trip and fall on a costume that is too long. Take time now to plan your trick-or-treat route. Select an area you know. If possible, trick or treat during daylight hours. If you plan to trick or treat after dark, carry flashlights. A reflective costume will help you child be seen at night as well. Before your little ones head out on Halloween, talk to them about these basic safety tips. First, remind them not to talk to or take anything from strangers. Tell them to walk, not run, and follow pedestrian safety rules like using crosswalks and sidewalks. Remind them to call home or 911 in case of emergency and to "stop, drop and roll" if their costume catches fire. Finally, tell your kids not to eat any candy before they get home. When they return home with a bag full of goodies, inspect all the candy and divide it up among the kids. Then, distribute it in small quantities so no one goes to bed with bellyaches. You also can ensure your home is trick-or-treater friendly. Turn on your outdoor lights, and keep the walkways clear of safety hazards. Consider offering healthier alternatives than candy. Prepackaged treats like popcorn will be a welcome snack in a bag full of chocolate and sugar. By following these tips, your family can have a fun and safe Halloween.

OPINION

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL

No longer such a quiet side of town

West Sacramento's north side has traditionally been its quiet side. The city has often talked about the communities of Broderick and Bryte only in terms of gangs or blight, or sometimes in terms of redevelopment.

Most insiders know the area has long been home to a number of modest-but-nice neighborhoods — often places where people live a long time, get to know each other, and keep an eye on each others' kids. You can find enclaves of immigrants (and descendants of immigrants) from south of the border, as well as Russia, Portugal and other parts of the world.

But the north hasn't asked for a whole lot, and it hasn't been very politically active over the years. Relatively few city council members or school board members have come from the north.

That's changing. So is the area's voice as a community.

When the school district recently decided to change the way West Sacramento's schools were structured, eliminating Golden State Middle School and folding the seventh and eighth grade levels into local elementary school campuses, hundreds of those who were concerned and spoke up were from Bryte and Broderick. When the city imposed a gang ordinance (including a gang members' curfew) on part of the north, again, the local voices made themselves heard. Now, there's a new community action group — an interesting mix of disparate people — representing Bryte and Broderick.

Last month, the police department held an "ice cream social" in the area — and 500 people showed up. That would have been unfathomable ten years ago.

Could this be a new era of public involvement and local responsibility for Bryte and Broderick?

Letters to the Editor

MyWestSac.com

A big thanks to the News-Ledger editor for putting the truth about MyWestSac.com on the front page for everyone to see.

Personally, I am happy to see that it is down. It's unfortunate for those that were using the website properly that a bunch of individuals, including the administrator, were using it to make some of the most vile-filled comments I have ever seen.

Some of the residents named happen to be personal friends of mine. Many of the bloggers seemed to have nothing but contempt for anyone living in the north of the city. Mr. Ali had no problem insulting the intelligence of others on his site but after what the News-Ledger has uncovered, I'm guessing he is eating a hefty plate of crow right about now.

The Ali's have touted how they were honored with an award for their website which was given to them by the mayor. No surprise there, the mayor was frequently gushed about on their site. It is beyond me why a site that was used as a vehicle to spread hate would be honored as doing the community a great service. This is especially troubling in light of the illicit activity associated with the hosting of the site.

Thanks again to the News-Ledger and to whoever figured out the indiscretion. As far as many of my friends and neighbors are concerned, you did the community a favor.

Party's over

Why is West Sacramento having a third open house for the fire department, at the same station? Budgets are being cut back everywhere and here is West Sac saying let's party again on taxpayer's money. The city is always asking for bond money for schools, flood protection, etc. They are taxing us out of our homes. Then they waste money on this!

Against Prop 8

I am writing to encourage residents of West Sacramento to vote "no" on Proposition 8 which would deny same sex couples the right to marry. I know several same sex couples well. They go to work each day, they pay taxes, they celebrate holidays with their extended families. They have loved each other, cared for one another when sick, and celebrated happy occasions together. They own homes together, they own businesses together, and they have "joint custody" of dogs and cats. And they have been married in recent months. Please don't deny these and other couples the right to be married, just like heterosexual couples.

It's only fair.

Disclose your meetings

West Sacramento City Council Member Mark Johannessen is under investigation by the state's political watchdog, the Fair Political Practices Commission, for improprieties I disclosed in a pair of complaints against him. As a former mayor who served on the city council for 12 years, I saw his lapse in ethics and felt the need to take action to preserve the integrity of our city's political system.

With the support of friends and neighbors who are equally concerned about the style of politics Mr. Johannessen has brought to West Sacramento, I have begun the funding of a campaign to make sure voters know the truth and have the information they need to make qualified decisions at election time. Everyone who shares the values upon which our city was built and can see the damaging effects Mr. Johannessen's style of politics will have in our community is invited to join me.

Last month, in front of the city council and again two weeks ago in a letter to the editor, I asked Mr. Johannessen to reveal the calendar of private meetings he has had with the developers of the University Park/Vina del Lago development in which he has a material conflict of interest. He has not released his calendar yet and we are learning he has continued to lobby on behalf of the developers against the advice of the city attorney and the FPPC.

So, in this public forum, I ask Mr. Johannessen: Do you ever intend to release your calendar of private meetings with the developers in whose project you have a material interest so the residents of West Sacramento can make their decisions regarding your integrity?

About Leland

I want to remind the community of a few important issues to remember before the upcoming school board election that came to mind in reading Mary Leland's campaign statement. Our district has seen more turmoil and misuse of public funds in the last four years than in the history of the district, much of which has been led by her comments and votes. While she has made the comments about "kids first" it would seem the architect and construction company have had more of her support than our students. Our district has been placed in its second year of program improvement by the State Department of Education for not meeting its goals.

Please remember, she is the only board member cited for conflict of interest by the

Career Opportunities

This Is Not Your Father's IT Management

(NAPS)—Who buys the most information technology in the world? You guessed it—the U.S. government.

Each year federal agencies purchase $60 billion of IT assets—equipment, software and services—with the government's purchasing arm, the General Services Administration (GSA), controlling one-third of the market. And that means GSA has a monumental need for best IT practices.

To keep government agencies humming, GSA has to support and supply all kinds of IT services. This means everything from policy and planning, security, systems analysis, applications software and operating systems to network services, data management, Internet services, systems administration and customer services. You name it, and if it's related to IT in any way, you can bet that GSA does it.

You might be surprised, but this is not old-time IT management. Two changes are most obvious: One, government business managers and IT system developers are learning to work together to plan integrated business strategies based on information. And two, they are extending the planning to more and more aspects of the organization—to enterprise-wide business systems.

IT-infused business strategies require both the "MBAs"

Information technology specialists are needed to help keep government agencies humming.

and the "DBAs" to understand each other's language and needs. Few are trained for this task and some resist it. The parties are also learning to relinquish exclusive control over their respective domains. For many, that is downright threatening, to say the least.

That's why GSA is encouraging its army of IT specialists to develop and practice some of the most advanced IT purchasing and management solutions anywhere. In the fast-paced arena of IT, and with that much taxpayer money at stake, GSA can't afford to allow its client base of government agencies to be left behind.

When it comes to IT and the many career opportunities available, the word around GSA is reflected in the agency's recruitment slogan: "You can do that here!"

"Eagle Eye"

Running time: 117 minutes
MPAA rating: PG-13

The last movie that teamed director D.J. Caruso and Shia LaBeouf was "Disturbia," the stupid and shoddily made rip-off of Hitchcock's "Rear Window." A rip-off that stole so much from the source material that a lawsuit has been filed claiming the movie was an unauthorized remake.

Their latest team-up is a high-tech, ridiculous rip-off of "The Man Who Knew Too Much." This movie is so lame that I'm tempted to file a lawsuit myself, not only to get my money back, but to place a restraining order against Caruso and LaBeouf from ever making another movie again.

Here's the plot: A supercomputer called ARI, developed by the government to combat terrorism, has the power to control every electronic device in the country: cell phones, traffic lights, LED billboards, trains, GPS systems on cars, you name it. ARI is so powerful it has become self-aware (like HAL in "2001").

A botched covert operation has convinced ARI that the president can no longer be trusted with issues of national security, so the computer sets into motion a series of preposterous events involving LaBeouf and co-star Michelle Monaghan that will lead ultimately to the murder of the president using an explosive crystal and a detonator hidden in the saxophone of Monaghan's young son.

Between the brain-dead script, choppy editing and horrible acting, the only way "Eagle Eye" could be worse is if Caruso had included Kate Hudson in the cast.

Avoid this movie like the plague. Instead, go to the video store and rent the far superior "The Man Who Knew Too Much."

The Legs Are the Last to Go: Aging, Acting, Marrying & Other Things I Learned the Hard Way
by Diahann Carroll
(Amistad Books, $24.95)
Reviewed by Larry Cox

Diahann Carroll is a survivor, overcoming bad relationships, racism and cancer. Her new memoir reflects the grit and determination that helped make her one of our most enduring stars.

Although probably best known for her role as Dominique Deveraux in "Dynasty," Carroll has accomplished much, much more during her lifetime. She is a Golden Globe and Tony Award-winning actress of stage and film. She has been nominated for an Oscar, a Grammy and an Emmy, and starred in her own groundbreaking network sitcom, "Julia." Her recent work in "Grey's Anatomy" earned her yet another Emmy nomination.

Her journey hasn't always been an easy one. She overcame a series of disastrous relationships, including an affair with Sidney Portier and an abusive marriage to Vic Damone. She faced racism — both subtle and overt, with courage and resolve.

Two of the most stunning examples of racism involved composers Richard Rodgers and Sir Andrew Lloyd Webber. At an opening-night cast party for "No Strings," Rodgers disinvented Carroll because the society maven hosting the party didn't want her children to be confused when they saw a black woman who was sophisticated and elegant, since, as she explained, in real life "they don't exist."

Several decades later, when she auditioned for Andrew Lloyd Webber's Toronto production of "Sunset Boulevard," the composer went out of his way to humiliate her. As Carroll observes, the racism of Rodgers and Webber was painful, but nothing compared to breast cancer, which she also overcame.

Her autobiography covers key experiences in her early life, her four marriages, the wisdom she found as she grew older, and how despite occasional setbacks she managed to thrive. Her memoir is surprisingly candid, impeccably stylish and always graceful. Her fans would expect nothing less.

Peanut Butter Sweet Potato Bake

Sweet Potatoes or Yams — there is a difference. Yams are moister than sweet potatoes and have darker skins. Sweet potatoes are versatile and are often baked, candied or made into pies. It's best not to boil them, as they'll lose much of their flavor.

- 1/2 cup unsweetened orange juice
- 1/4 cup Peter Pan or Skippy reduced-fat peanut butter
- 2 tablespoons Brown Sugar

- Twin cups (16 ounces) sliced cooked sweet potatoes
- 1/2 cup miniature marshmallows

Preheat oven to 350 F. Spray an 8-by-8-inch baking dish with butter-flavored cooking spray. In a large bowl, combine orange juice, peanut butter and Brown Sugar Twin. Add sweet potatoes. Mix well to coat. Pour mixture into prepared baking dish. Bake for 20 minutes. Sprinkle marshmallows evenly over top. Continue baking for 5 minutes or until marshmallows start to melt and are lightly browned. Divide into 6 servings.

Cranberry-Orange Spice Cookies

Crystallized ginger and pumpkin pie spice give these Cranberry-Orange Spice Cookies an autumn-inspired zing that draws cookie lovers from near and far!

- 1/2 Basic Cookie Dough
- 1/2 cup dried cranberries, finely chopped
- 1/4 cup crystallized ginger, finely chopped
- 2 teaspoons grated fresh orange peel

Basic Cookie Dough

This simple dough calls for butter (no substitutions) because butter not only gives the best flavor in baked goods, but also makes the dough much more manageable to work with.

- 1/4 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup (2 sticks) butter (no

- substitutions), softened
- 3/4 cup granulated sugar
- 1 large egg
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

2. In large bowl, with mixer on medium speed, beat butter and sugar 1 minute or until creamy, occasionally scraping bowl with rubber spatula. Add egg and vanilla; beat until well mixed. Reduce speed to low; gradually beat in flour mixture just until blended, occasionally scraping bowl.

BEDEVILED EGGS

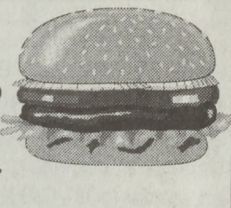

- 6 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vinegar
- 1/8 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 Dash Worcestershire sauce
- 1/16 teaspoon horseradish, grated
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise
- 1 teaspoon French mustard
- 1 Dash pepper
- Sliced olives stuffed with pimentos

Bring eggs to a boil slowly in a copper pot (to prevent green tinge to yolks). Boil eggs for 15 minutes and cool for 10 minutes. Remove shells and cut in half lengthwise. Remove yolks with a spoon. Combine seasonings with yolks and mash together. Then refill whites with yolk mixture. Garnish with olive in the center of the yolk (so the egg is staring at you) and serve.

Elvira

She was born Cassandra Peterson in Manhattan, Kansas, but in 1981 made the transformation into her alter ego, Elvira, who snagged a gig as the hostess of the local Hollywood horror-movie show, "Elvira's Movie Macabre." She quickly became a household name, and was the first horror host to be syndicated nationally. Elvira's reign as "Queen of Halloween" has spanned 26 years and includes two feature films, an IMAX film and two theme park rides. She has appeared in national ad campaigns for Pepsi and Coors, recorded five music CDs, published four books and licensed more than 400 products, including her own comic-book series, Elvira's "Night Brew" beer, "Evil"
